Excellent. We are still moving this along rapidly and I hope to get you something before the weekend. I understand all of your points.

I just checked -the call tonight is not on the NCAA matter. That was a miscommunication.

What PSU would like to have weighed in this discussion in light of today's information -

1. PSU commissioned the Freeh Report. The Board made that move. there were no limits to the inquiry.
2. PSU accepts the Freeh Report and will implement all recommendations.
3. The individuals at the center of this problem are no longer at PSU.
4. Can we discuss the issue of the post season ban and $60 million before you send a draft with numbers attached? The school needs to be able to assess the finances.
5. Separate from the horrible criminal acts, the overriding theme of the Freeh Report is CULTURE
 - a. PSU has embraced all the recommendations of the Freeh Report re culture.
 - b. PSU will embrace every recommendation coming out of the Integrity Agreement - which is a process aimed at the culture.

Thank you for your consideration of these.

Gene

These are just my own views. Just mine. And they are staying inside my head.

It is fair that PSU would pay a heavy price. It is not fair that folks on the NCAA board would try to reform college athletics through one case. It's starting to feel like that. David - you know I am not wimpy on penalties and the ramifications of folks losing their ethic and priorities. My family and I paid a dear price for that back in time - carrying the NCAA banner. I paid a personal and professional price - and so did my family. It still follows me around here in Tuscaloosa.

How many institutions represented on the NCAA board could stand scrutiny on whether athletics is the tail wagging the dog?

Have people lost sight of the fact that PSU will be paying out tens of millions of dollars to the victims? How can people go from 30 million to 60 million in 48 hours?

This is just my own personal rant - and so is this - at some point an institution may be better off under a traditional infractions process. But that is just inside my head and going nowhere else for now.

I will relay the info to PSU.
