Thanks, Ronnie. This is good. I'm assuming it will source back to NCAA.org?

Bob, let us know your thoughts and if you need to run this past Mark.

Thanks.

Wikipedia - part to be removed:

As a result of increasing public pressure, Emmert bypassed key bylaws and procedures and forced Penn State University President Rodney Erickson, to either sign a consent decree accepting the sanctions or suffer the death penalty. [5] This action drew mixed reactions from the public, some of whom believed he overstepped his boundaries and did not provide Penn State the due process they believed was required.

Wikipedia, what will be added (all taken from ncaa.org):

The NCAA Division I Board of Directors and NCAA Executive Committee directed Emmert to examine the circumstances and determine appropriate action in consultation with these presidential bodies. "There has been much speculation on whether or not the NCAA has the authority to impose any type of penalty related to Penn State," said Ed Ray, Executive Committee chair and Oregon State president. "This egregious behavior not only goes against our rules and constitution, but also against our values."

Because Penn State accepted the Freeh Report factual findings, which the university itself commissioned, the NCAA determined traditional investigative proceedings would be redundant and unnecessary. "We cannot look to NCAA history to determine how to handle circumstances so disturbing, shocking and disappointing," said Emmert. "As the individuals charged with governing college sports, we have a responsibility to act. These events should serve as a call to every single school and athletics department to take an honest look at its campus environment and eradicate the 'sports are king' mindset that can so dramatically cloud the judgment of educators."

Bob: Got it -- we'll come up with a draft for review.

Stacey/Ronnie: Please work up a first draft for my review by end of business today.

Thanks.

Just saw that the Wikipedia site in me grossly misses the mark in describing Penn State decision. Check it out and see how we put the record straight.

Thanks
